Co-operatives – Capital Idea(s)!

Conference Theme

Co-operatives have different ideas about how to do business. These ideas are reflected in co-operative principles, practice and theory. They extend to all aspects of business and economic activity – including to capital in its various financial, human, social and natural forms. Co-operative ideas challenge our common assumptions about business as usual and inspire us to envision and implement more just, participatory and sustainable business practices.

Co-operative ideas, however, are also challenged by the often harsh realities in which practitioners attempt to implement them – situations of abject poverty, depleted communities, dwindling resource bases, environmental degradation, oligopolistic market structures, discriminatory policy regimes, geographic and social isolation, etc. Can we develop ideas and theories that can inform co-operatives when they are confronted with such deficits of financial, human, social and natural capital?

The theme of this year's annual conference highlights the power of co-operative ideas to inspire and guide the development of a more just, participatory and sustainable economy. In particular it focuses on the distinct approach of co-operatives to developing and using key resources – capital bases – and the challenges involved in such an endeavour.

Submission Guidelines

We invite researchers, students, and practitioners to submit any of five types of proposals:

(1) The Individual Paper provides the presenter with the opportunity to present on a topic for approximately 20 minutes. They will join 1-2 other presenters of a similar theme. There will be time for a Q and A. Individual paper proposals should include: a) your name, title, affiliation and email address; b) a short (two-line) biographical note; c) title of the paper; and d) a 150 word abstract (to be printed in the program) that includes the argument, which should include the relationship of the paper to the literature, the research question, methods and, where applicable, findings. Proposals for both empirical and theoretical papers are invited.

(2) The Panel Proposal creates a space for a group (3) of presenters who have a common theme in their presentations to self-select to present together. Presenters will have approximately 20 minutes each to present. There will time for a Q and A. Panel proposals should include: a) the title of the panel; 2) a 150 word description of the issue or theme that the panel investigates and how the individual papers relate to the theme/ issue; 3) the names, affiliations and contact information for all panel participants, and; 4) 150 word descriptions of all panel presentations.

(3) The Roundtable is an opportunity for moderated discussion. A panel of discussants will be posed ideas or questions on a topic by a moderator and the audience. Discussants are not expected to and should not deliver formal papers. Roundtable proposals should include: a) the title of the roundtable; 2) a 150 word description of the issue or theme that the roundtable investigates (including some possible questions); and 3) the names, affiliations and contact information for all participants including the moderator (if decided).

(4) The Workshop is an opportunity for a topic to be presented and interacted with in a dynamic and engaging manner. It should involve audience participation. Proposals should include a) the title of the workshop; 2) a 150 word description of the issues or theme that the workshop investigates; 3) the name(s), affiliations and contact information for all workshop presenters, and 4) a short description of what methods will be used to make it a workshop.

(5) The Case Study is similar to other individual presentations in providing authors 20 minutes to present on a specific topic. The case study is characterized by a detailed focus on a particular institution or practice, and frequently involves pedagogical intent and specific recommendations for teaching use or research.*

All abstracts and proposals are due on Friday January 16th, 2015. We encourage those who would want to be in a joint session to please submit as early as possible. They may be submitted either in English or French. No more than two presentations per person will be permitted. All proposals are subject to peer review. Applicants will be informed of acceptance by Friday February 27th, 2015. Please submit your abstract using the following link:
